SB 1156: death benefits; burial costs

Sponsor: Senator Gowan, LD 19

Committee on Government

Overview

Increases, from $5,000 to $10,000, the amount of burial expenses paid for a worker's compensation death benefit.

History

In the event of a loss sustained on account of injury or death specified employees and their dependents are entitled to receive compensation. These employees include but are not limited to: 1) all persons in the service of the state of Arizona and its municipalities including police and fire departments; 2) specified lessees of mining property; 3) firefighters, volunteer firefighters, policemen and voluntary policemen; 4) members of the Department of Public Safety reserve; and 5) members of a volunteer sheriff's reserve (A.R.S. §§ 23-901, 23-1021).

In the case of an injury involving death the following compensation amounts are prescribed in statute: 1) burial expenses of $5,000; and 2) differing percentages of the average monthly wage of the deceased individual based on the existence of a surviving spouse or dependent kin. A surviving spouse's benefits terminate upon their death or remarriage. The benefits for surviving children cease upon the child's eighteenth birthday, unless they are incapable of self-support (A.R.S. § 23-1046).
