convicted in another state who is not required to be supervised to complete the person's court-ordered treatment in Colorado (unsupervised person). The bill clarifies the process for treating a supervised or unsupervised person in a private treatment program in Colorado. A private treatment program is a program that provides substance use treatment, sex offender management services, or domestic violence services (program). The bill directs the program to assist the supervised or unsupervised person with registering with the interstate compact administrator. The department of corrections (department) is required to complete a criminal history records check of the supervised or unsupervised person to verify that the person is a supervised or unsupervised person. The bill specifies the requirements for programs when the participant is a supervised person.

Current law subjects a program or supervised person to a misdemeanor for violating the provisions of the interstate compact. The bill states that a violation may be reported to the program's appropriate licensing, certifying, or approving agency for potential corrective action. The bill requires the department to periodically update the out-of-state offender questionnaire used by private treatment program providers.
