Joint Budget Committee. There are 2 general fund obligations that apply for each fiscal year in a period of 5 fiscal years. Second, a percentage of the total general fund revenues must be transferred to the capital construction fund and the highway users tax fund.

The 5-year period of reserve and transfer requirements begins in the fiscal year 2012-13, unless a trigger is not met. The trigger is met if Colorado personal income grows by at least 5% during the 2012-13 fiscal year, which is growth from the calendar year 2011 to the calendar year 2012. If the trigger is not met, then the reserve and transfers are not required until the first fiscal year that there is at least 5% of growth in Colorado personal income based on the equivalent later calendar years. Once the trigger is met, then all 5 years of the reserve and transfer requirements will apply.

The bill eliminates the current trigger mechanism and suspends the initial reserve and transfer requirements until the first year after the personal income trigger is met. As compared to the current law, this change adds a year between the trigger occurring and the initial application of the reserve and transfer requirements. The "personal income trigger" is defined to mean an increase in Colorado personal income from one calendar year, starting with 2011, to the next by an amount equal to 5% or more. The bill also requires the estimates reported by the bureau of economic analysis in the United States department of commerce to be used for Colorado personal income.
