Karen Kwok

Karen Kwok, MSN, FNP-BC, MPH, is an advocate, educator, and collaborator in public health and family nursing. Her passion for public service includes wellness programs and patient care services in California's Yolo, Fresno, San Mateo, and San Francisco Counties as well as the Ministry of Health in Sub-Saharan Africa, Asia, and Latin America/Caribbean. In cultural humility, she finds joy in connecting with her patients of Asian, Latino, and African American descent. With over 20 years committed to patient health advocacy in resilient communities, she now serves as a Nurse Practitioner at Washington DC's Howard University.

The American Nurses Credentialing Center has identified Ms. Kwok as a Family Nurse Practitioner content expert for the national certification exam. She consults for a variety of organizations ranging from companies working on innovative point-of-care medical devices, fiscal sponsoring agencies supporting child welfare, and capacity building with community development nonprofit organizations. Recognized for her potential in social innovation, she received leadership fellowships with Hands on Bay Area, Active Citizens, New Politics Academy, and National Urban Fellows.

Her team-oriented position draws from mentoring in shared leadership and passion for health equity in resilient communities. With mentoring young women of color, she seeks a vision of health equity and wellness opportunities reflective of this shared leadership. Ms. Kwok's areas of scholarship include improving access to primary health care and community-based partnership development with recognition from peer professional organizations and foundations, notably Hartford Geriatric Academy, Bill and Melinda Gates Institute, California Governor Gray Davis, and President Obama for her public service.

A Ward 1 resident, Ms. Kwok holds a Master of Science degree in Nursing from the University of California and a Master of Public Health from Johns Hopkins University.
