Summary

I have always been fascinated with the amazing results employees can deliver when their natural talents are nurtured by their employers. Even early in my career, I noticed the huge impact the right talent in the right position can have on the business. Then, in increasingly accountable roles I learned how developing, engaging, rewarding and retaining talent could be the difference between business success and failure.

I've also developed expertise in change management, organizational development, coaching, employee relations, strategic workforce planning, employee engagement and leadership development.
