COMMITTEE SUBSTITUTE - Substantial Changes

I. Summary:

CS/SB 998 provides for notice, hearing, and other requirements relevant to terminating a police chief's employment. The bill:

- Provides findings in support of the procedural requirements and other requirements relevant to terminating a police chief's employment.
- Prohibits a person employed or appointed as police chief from being terminated without providing written notice, including just cause for the termination, and the opportunity to defend himself or herself against termination at a public meeting or hearing. This provision does not supersede a written employment contract or agreement that provides employment, discipline, or termination standards or procedures.
- Authorizes the police chief to be represented by counsel, including at the public meeting or hearing, at his or her request.
- Prohibits a police chief from being discharged; disciplined; demoted; denied a promotion, transfer, or reassignment; or otherwise discriminated against in regard to his or her employment or appointment, or be threatened with any such treatment, for exercising any rights provided by the bill.
- Requires a police chief who is aggrieved by an alleged violation of his or her rights as provided in the new section to provide written notice to his or her employing agency, and requires the employing agency to cure the alleged violation.
- Defines "chief of police," and "employing agency."

If the provisions of the bill have any fiscal impact on municipal governments, the impact is indeterminate. See Section V. Fiscal Impact Statement.

The bill takes effect July 1, 2023.

II. Present Situation:

A police chief is appointed or hired by a city official or officials (mayor, city manager, city commission, etc.) and “charged with the responsibility to provide leadership and management of police department resources to protect and serve citizens of and visitors to those municipalities.”¹

According to the Florida Police Chiefs Association, Florida police chiefs are at will employees.² Police chiefs are not covered under s. 112.532, F.S., commonly referred to as the Officers’ Bill of Rights, which provides procedural protections to a law enforcement officer or correctional officer under investigation or subject to interrogation by the officer’s employing agency for any reason that could lead to disciplinary action, suspension, demotion, or dismissal. There does not appear to be any statutory right to notice and hearing for a police chief prior to his or her termination.³

III. Effect of Proposed Changes:

The bill creates s. 112.5321, F.S., which provides for notice, hearing, and other requirements relevant to terminating a police chief’s employment. The bill:

- Provides findings in support of the procedural requirements and other requirements relevant to terminating a police chief’s employment.
- Prohibits a person employed or appointed as police chief from being terminated without providing written notice, including just cause for the termination, and the opportunity to defend himself or herself against termination at a public meeting or hearing.⁴
- Authorizes the police chief to be represented by counsel, including at the public meeting or hearing, at his or her request.
- Prohibits a police chief from being discharged; disciplined; demoted; denied a promotion, transfer, or reassignment; or otherwise discriminated against in regard to his or her employment or appointment, or be threatened with any such treatment, for exercising any rights provided in the new section.
- Requires a police chief who is aggrieved by an alleged violation of his or her rights as provided in the new section to provide written notice to his or her employing agency within 3 days after the alleged violation which must contain specific information relating to the alleged violation.

² E-mail from Jennifer Pritt, Executive Director, Florida Police Chiefs Association, dated March 22, 2023 (on file with Committee on Criminal Justice).

⁴ However, these requirements do not supersede any written employment contract or agreement that provides employment, discipline, or termination standards or procedures.

- Requires the employing agency to cure the alleged violation within 5 days after receipt of the written notification unless a longer time period is agreed to in writing by both parties or is necessary to satisfy notice requirements for notice of a public meeting or hearing pursuant to s. 286.011, F.S.

The bill amends s. 112.531, F.S., to provide that “chief of police” means a person, other than an elected official, who is appointed or employed full time by the state or any political subdivision thereof to be the chief law enforcement officer of a law enforcement agency and who is not covered by the protections under s. 112.532, F.S. The term does not include state law enforcement agency executives whose appointment or employment is governed by other provisions of law.

Additionally, the bill provides that “employing agency” has the same meaning as in s. 943.10(4), F.S., which defines the term as any agency or unit of government or any municipality or the state or any political subdivision thereof, or any agent thereof, which has constitutional or statutory authority to employ or appoint persons as officers. The term also includes any private entity which has contracted with the state or county for the operation and maintenance of a nonjuvenile detention facility. Most of this definition will not actually apply to a police chief’s employing agency.

The bill takes effect July 1, 2023.
