16 (3) Electronic mail.

17 (4) Internet based communications.

18 Sec. 6. Subject to section 7 of this chapter, a psychologist and a
19 supervisee may use telepsychology to treat an individual.

20 Sec. 7. (a) Before using telepsychology, the psychologist or 21 supervisor, with the aid that the supervisee is practically able to 22 provide, must do the following:

23 (1) Establish and maintain competency in the use of
24 telepsychology, including through continuing education,
25 consultation, or other procedures, in conformance with
26 prevailing standards of scientific and professional knowledge.

27 (2) Establish and maintain competency in the appropriate use
28 of the information technologies used in the practice of 29 telepsychology.

30 (3) Assess if the client's primary problem and apparent
31 condition are consistent with the use of telepsychology to the 32 client's benefit.

33 (4) Determine if the client has sufficient knowledge and skills
34 to use the technology involved in telepsychology or if the client
35 can use a personal aid or assistive device to benefit from the 36 service.

37 (5) Refrain from providing telepsychology services to any 38 client when the outcome of the psychological analysis is
39 inconsistent with the delivery of telepsychology services,
40 including clinical or technological issues.

41 (6) At each contact with the client, make reasonable efforts to 42 verify the identity of the client.

- 1 (7) Establish an alternative means of contacting the client.
2 (8) Provide the client with an alternative means of contacting
3 the psychologist or supervisee.
4 (9) Establish a written agreement concerning the client's
5 access to face-to-face emergency services in the client's
6 geographical area, including instances where the client is
7 experiencing a suicidal or homicidal crisis.
8 (10) When feasible, use secure communications with clients,
9 which may include encrypted text messages via electronic
10 mail or secure Internet web sites.
11 (11) Obtain and document consent for the use of nonsecure
12 communications.
13 (12) Obtain the written informed consent of the client, in 14 language that is likely to be understood and is consistent with 15 accepted professional and legal requirements, concerning the 16 following:
17 (A) The limitations and innovative nature of using
18 telepsychology in providing psychological services.
19 (B) Potential risks to confidentiality of information due to 20 the use of telepsychology.
21 (C) Potential risks of sudden and unpredictable disruption
22 of telepsychology services and how an alternative means of 23 reestablishing an electronic or other connection will be
24 used under those circumstances.
25 (D) How and when the psychologist or supervisee will
26 respond to routine electronic messages.
27 (E) Under what circumstances the psychologist or 28 supervisee and client will use an alternative means of 29 communication under emergency circumstances.
30 (F) Who else may have access to communications between
31 the client and the psychologist or supervisee.
32 (G) Specific methods for ensuring that a client's electronic 33 communications are directed only to the psychologist or 34 supervisee.
35 (b) A supervisee's use of telepsychology may not include any
36 activities that may be identified as practicing psychology
37 independently.
38 (c) A supervisee's use of telepsychology may be used to provide 39 psychological training supervision only as a supplement to the 40 supervision requirements in IC 25-33-1 and may not replace any
41 individual face-to-face supervision requirements.
42 (d) The supervisor must provide the supervisee with an

1 alternative means of contacting the supervisor.
2 Sec. 8. The psychologist or supervisor who uses telepsychology
3 shall ensure that confidential communications stored electronically
4 cannot be recovered or accessed by unauthorized persons when the
5 psychologist or supervisor disposes of electronic equipment and
6 data.
