DETAILED ANALYSIS

Agricultural linked deposits

The bill expands the types of businesses eligible for funding under the Agricultural Linked Deposit Program (Ag-LINK), changes the statutory cap in Ag-LINK loans to a cap established by the State Treasurer, and changes the statutory goal of state investments in the Ag-LINK Program.

Ag-LINK utilizes linked deposits to allow certain agricultural businesses to obtain low-cost loans to be used exclusively for agricultural purposes on land or in facilities owned or operated by the business. A linked deposit is a certificate of deposit or other instrument placed by the Treasurer of State with a financial institution at a below-market rate. In return, the financial institution agrees to pass the savings on to the approved borrower in the form of an interest-rate reduction. Ag-LINK is one of several linked deposit programs established in the Revised Code.¹

The bill expands the types of businesses eligible to borrow under Ag-LINK to include agricultural cooperatives. An agricultural cooperative is an association organized anywhere in the United States to which all of the following apply:

- The cooperative engages in any activity in connection with the propagation, raising, producing, harvesting, storing, drying, handling, processing, or marketing of agricultural products; procuring equipment and supplies or providing services for producers and others; bargaining; and any activity related to the foregoing.
- Producers or agricultural cooperatives exercise more than half the voting control of the cooperative.
- The cooperative does at least half its business with producers or agricultural cooperatives.²

Current law limits the amount of any loan made under Ag-LINK to $150,000. The bill removes this explicit limit and leaves the amount to be determined by the Treasurer.³

Lastly, under current law, the Treasurer is permitted to invest in all linked deposit programs established by the Revised Code so long as the amount invested does not exceed 12% of the state's total average investment portfolio as determined by the Treasurer. Current law also requires the Treasurer to attempt to place in agricultural linked deposits in particular up to $165 million of that maximum 12%. The bill removes the latter requirement.⁴

Interim funds

Investment vehicles

The Revised Code specifies the types of obligations in which the Treasurer of State may invest state interim funds, which are state dollars that have been received by the state treasury but are not needed to meet immediate obligations of the state.⁵ Among other things, the Treasurer may invest interim funds in bonds, notes, and other obligations of the state, including obligations issued by the Treasurer, the Ohio Public Facilities Commission, and other entities. The bill adds the Ohio Higher Educational Facility Commission and state institutions of higher education (any state university or college, community college, state community college, university branch, or technical college) to this list.⁶

The bill also allows the Treasurer to invest interim funds in obligations issued by the State of Ohio, any political subdivision, or by or on behalf of any nonprofit corporation or association doing business in Ohio rated in the four highest categories by at least one nationally recognized standard rating service and identified in an agreement described below. An obligation is so rated if either the debt interest itself or the obligor is rated in the four highest categories by such a rating service.⁷

Agreements

Agreements with the state, political subdivisions, and nonprofits

When obligations issued under the above paragraph have a demand feature to tender the obligation at par plus accrued interest, the bill permits the Treasurer of State and any entity issuing the obligations to enter into an agreement providing for the following:

- The purchase of the obligations by the Treasurer on terms and subject to conditions set forth in the agreement;
- Payment to the Treasurer of a fee as consideration for the agreement of the Treasurer to purchase the obligations.

The bill prohibits the Treasurer from entering into agreements for obligations that, in the aggregate, exceed 10% of the state's total average portfolio, as determined by the Treasurer.⁸

State Securities Tender Program Fund

The bill creates the State Securities Tender Program Fund (fund) in the state treasury, which the Treasurer may use solely for operations of the Office of the Treasurer of State. The fund is composed of all money collected by the Treasurer from the fee imposed under “Agreements with the state, political subdivisions, and nonprofits” above. The Treasurer must deposit all such fees into the fund. The amount of income from the State Securities Tender Program credited to the fund may not exceed 1% of the average par value of obligations subject to the above agreements. All other such income must be credited to the General Revenue Fund.⁹

Agreements with a state university or college

When a state university or college issues obligations under the Higher Education Law, the bill permits the Treasurer and the state university or college to enter into an agreement providing for the following:

- The purchase of the obligations by the Treasurer on terms and subject to conditions set forth in the agreement;
- The Department of Higher Education to withhold, in the event the state university or college does not pay bond service charges when due, appropriated funds allocated to the state university or college in an amount sufficient to pay the bond service charges, less any amounts deposited for that purpose under the bond proceedings. Upon the request of the Treasurer, the Department of Higher Education must promptly pay to the Treasurer the amounts withheld.

The bill uses the Education Law’s definition of “state university or college,” which means the following institutions: University of Akron, Bowling Green State University, Central State University, University of Cincinnati, Cleveland State University, Kent State University, Miami University, Ohio University, Ohio State University, Shawnee State University, University of Toledo, Wright State University, Youngstown State University, Northeast Ohio Medical University, and the board of trustees of each.¹⁰
