Bill Analysis

SB 1106 creates the Citizen Health Mandate Protection Act. The measure provides that any employer requiring its employees to receive a vaccine may be liable for actual and punitive damages arising from claims relating to injuries or illness caused by a vaccination or medicinal treatment program. If such employers knowingly require the vaccination or treatment without confirming its safety based on publicly available medical testing and documentation, then they will be automatically subject to punitive damages upon a finding of liability. The minimum award for punitive damages shall be $1 million. Employers subject to claim made under the provisions of this measure shall not have the limitations of liability or immunity provided by the Governmental Tort Claims Act or the Public Readiness and Emergency Preparedness Act.
