4 This Act may be cited as the “City and State Diplo-
5 macy Act”.

6 SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

7 Congress finds the following:

8 (1) The supremacy clause of the United States
9 Constitution (article VI, clause 2) establishes that

1 the Federal Government has the primary role in con-
2 ducting diplomacy on behalf of the United States; in 3 turn, the Department of State, which was created 4 pursuant to statute by Congress in 1789, has the 5 lead role in formulating and implementing United 6 States foreign policy.

7 (2) The growth of subnational cooperation has 8 enabled States and municipalities to play an increas-
9 ingly significant role in foreign policy and com-
10 plement the efforts of the Department of State by—

11 (A) supporting exchanges and cooperation
12 agreements between elected leaders and officials
13 of State and municipal governments and those 14 of international cities, regions, and countries;

16 foreign markets and foreign direct investment
17 into the United States; and

18 (C) sharing best practices and striking
19 agreements with foreign counterparts on a wide 20 range of topics, including facilitating trade and 21 investment, protecting the health and safety of 22 their respective citizens, cooperating on energy
23 and the environment, and promoting people-to-24 people exchanges.

1 (3) Global networks made up exclusively of local 2 government officials are at the forefront of har-
3 nassing the power of cities to advance international
4 cooperation, including C40 Cities Climate Leader-
5 ship Group, ICLEI, United Cities and Local Govern-
6 ments, Global Parliament of Mayors, Urban20,
7 Strong Cities Network, and Global Compact of May-8 ors.

9 (4) In 2010, the Department of State appointed
10 the first-ever special representative for Global Inter-
11 governmental Affairs, who led efforts to build stra-
12 tegic peer-to-peer relationships between the Depart-
13 ment of State, State and local officials, and their 14 foreign counterparts.

15 SEC. 3. SENSE OF CONGRESS.

16 It is the sense of Congress that—

17 (1) it is in the interest of the United States to 18 support robust two-way partnerships between the 19 Department of State and subnational entities to ad-
20 vance United States foreign policy objectives, im-
21 prove understanding of United States diplomacy,
22 and leverage Federal resources to enhance the im-
23 pact of subnational engagements; and

24 (2) the creation in the Department of State of 25 an Office of City and State Diplomacy, headed by a

1 senior Department official of appropriate rank to 2 represent the United States at international fora
3 would bolster United States interests through inter-
4 national agreements and Federal support to State
5 and local entities.
