Whereas public works professionals and public works first responders work around the clock to ensure vital infrastructure, facilities, and services of communities deliver dependable, sustainable, and resilient public health, high quality of life, and well-being throughout the United States, and advance the quality of life for all;

Whereas such infrastructure, facilities, and services could not be provided without the dedicated efforts of public works professionals, who are engineers, managers, and employees of Federal, State, and local governments and the private sector, and who are responsible for rebuilding, improving, and protecting the Nation’s transportation, water supply, water treatment and solid waste systems, public buildings, and other structures and facilities essential for citizens of the United States;

Whereas public works professionals are first responders and are often first to arrive and last to leave a natural disaster area or incident scene;

Whereas it is in the public interest for citizens, civic leaders, and children of the United States to gain knowledge of, and to maintain a strong interest and understanding of, the importance of public works and public works programs in their respective communities; and

Whereas the week of May 19 through May 25, 2024, marks the 64th annual “National Public Works Week” and its theme, “Advancing Quality of Life for All”: Now, therefore, be it
