RESOLUTION

Expressing support for designation of the month of February 2018 as “National Teen Dating Violence Awareness and Prevention Month”.

Whereas while dating violence, domestic violence, sexual violence, and stalking affect women regardless of age, teens and young women are especially vulnerable;

Whereas according to a National Intimate Partner and Sexual Violence Survey of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), most rape and intimate partner violence is first experienced before age 25;

Whereas according to the Morbidity and Mortality Weekly Report of the CDC nearly 1.5 million high school students experienced physical dating violence;

Whereas Public Law 113–4, the Violence Against Women Reauthorization Act of 2013, includes the SMART Teen Dating Violence Act, a bill to improve the coordination and effectiveness of existing programs to address abusive youth relationships;

Whereas according to the 2015 Youth Risk Behavior Surveillance System (YRBSS) of the CDC, nearly 10 percent of high school students have been hit, slapped, or physically hurt by a dating partner in the past year;

Whereas according to a 2014 study from the University of Illinois, 66 percent of dating youth from early to late adolescence reported various forms of dating violence, including cyber abuse, physical violence, psychological abuse, and sexual coercion;

Whereas according to data from the YRBSS, almost 20 percent of teen girls, who were exposed to physical dating violence, did not attend school on one or more occasions during the past 30 days due to feeling unsafe at school or on the way to or from school;

Whereas a recent Ball State University Study recent study found that 81 percent of school counselors reported that they did not have a school protocol on how to respond to an incident of teen dating violence, but 61 percent of school counselors reported that they had assisted victims of teen dating violence in the past two years;

Whereas a study published in Pediatrics suggests that teen dating violence is a substantial public health problem as victims of teen dating violence are at increased risk of mood and behavioral problems as young adults, and at increased risk of future violence in relationships;

Whereas girls victimized by a teen boyfriend reported more heavy drinking, smoking, depression, and thoughts of suicide, and teens of both sexes who were in aggressive relationships were two to three times more likely to be in violent relationships as young adults;

Whereas being physically and sexually abused leaves teen girls up to six times more likely to become pregnant and more than twice as likely to contract a sexually transmitted disease;

Whereas more than three times as many teens (20 percent) as parents of teens (6 percent) admit that parents know little or nothing about the dating relationships of tweens;

Whereas 28 percent of parents are reluctant about discussing dating violence with teens they feel are too young and 8.5 percent of parents feeling their children will learn from experience;

Whereas 74 percent of teenage boys and 66 percent of teenage girls say that they have not had a conversation with a parent about dating abuse in the past year;

Whereas one in four teens in a relationship say that they have been called names, harassed, or put down by their partner through phone calls and texting;

Whereas 70 percent of college students who were in an abusive relationship failed to realize that they were in an abusive relationship, and 60 percent of such students said that no one stepped in to help them when they were in an abusive relationship;

Whereas the severity of violence among intimate partners has been shown to be greater in cases where the pattern of violence was established in adolescence;

Whereas primary prevention programs are a key part of addressing teen dating violence, and many successful examples of such programs include education, community outreach, and social marketing campaigns that are culturally appropriate;

Whereas educating middle school students and their parents about the importance of building healthy relationships and preventing teen dating violence is key to deterring abuse before it begins;

Whereas skilled assessment and intervention programs are necessary for youth victims and abusers; and

Whereas the establishment of the month of February 2018 as National Teen Dating Violence Awareness and Prevention Month will benefit schools, communities, and families regardless of socioeconomic status, race, and sex: Now, therefore, be it

1       Resolved, That the House of Representatives—

2               (1) supports the designation of “National Teen
3       Dating Violence Awareness and Prevention Month”;

4               (2) supports communities in empowering teens
5       to develop healthy relationships throughout their
6       lives; and

7               (3) calls on the people of the United States, in-
8       cluding youth, parents, schools, law enforcement,
9       State and local officials, and interested groups to ob-
10      serve National Teen Dating Violence Awareness and 11      Prevention Month with appropriate programs and

- 1 activities that promote awareness and prevention of
- 2 teen dating violence in their communities.
