

116TH CONGRESS
1ST SESSION

S. 2398

To amend the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 to ensure privacy with respect to voter information.

IN THE SENATE OF THE UNITED STATES

JULY 31, 2019

Mrs. FEINSTEIN introduced the following bill; which was read twice and referred to the Committee on Rules and Administration

A BILL

To amend the Federal Election Campaign Act of 1971 to ensure privacy with respect to voter information.

1 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2 tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

3 SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

4 This Act may be cited as the “Voter Privacy Act of 5 2019”.

6 SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

7 Congress makes the following findings:

8 (1) According to the Pew Research Center, 90 9 percent of Americans reported using the internet in

1 2019, which was an increase from 52 percent in 2 2000.

3 (2) Internet service providers, browsers,
4 websites, search engines, email providers, device
5 manufacturers, and certain social media companies 6 collect unique data on nearly every American's on-7 line and increasingly offline activities, every day.

8 (3) One United States based search engine ad-9 vertises its ability to track hundreds of categories of 10 data about specific individuals including age, gender, 11 occupation, income level, sexual orientation, national 12 origin, religion, medical conditions such as AIDS, 13 erectile dysfunction, bipolar disorder, eating dis-14 orders, and sexually transmitted diseases, family in-15 formation such as number of children, children with 16 special needs, infertility, and substance misuse, and 17 support for social issues such as reproductive rights, 18 unions and labor issues, and support for gun rights.

19 (4) Targeting services, such as certain large 20 search engines and social media platforms, maintain 21 sophisticated data profiles on nearly every American.
22 These targeting services are used by third parties to 23 target and deliver communications to specific indi-
24 viduals based on their sensitive personal information,

1 even if a third party does not control any individual's personal information.

3 (5) In testimony before the Committee on the 4 Judiciary of the Senate titled, "Understanding Digi-
5 tal Advertising Ecosystem and the Impact on Data 6 Privacy", the Committee received the following testi-7 mony regarding behavioral advertising: "almost 8 every single time you visit a website: data about you 9 is broadcast to tens or hundreds of companies, which 10 lets advertisers compete for the opportunity to show 11 you an ad. Advertising is necessary, and this sounds 12 OK. But wait until you hear what information about 13 you is in that big broadcast: it can include your – 14 inferred sexual orientation, political views, whether 15 you are Christian, Jewish, or Muslim, etc., whether 16 you have AIDs, erectile dysfunction, or bi-polar dis-
17 order. It includes what you are reading, watching, 18 and listening to. It includes your location, sometimes 19 right up to your exact GPS coordinates. And it in-20 cludes unique ID codes that are as specific to you 21 as is your social security number, so that all of this 22 data can be tied to you over time. This allows com-23 panies you have never heard of to maintain intimate 24 profiles on you, and on everyone you have ever 25 known.".

1 (6) Online surveillance techniques are becoming 2 more sophisticated. According to the Center for In-3 formation Technology Policy at Princeton Univer-4 sity, new website tracking software can provide real-5 time surveillance of an individual's online activity:
6 "Unlike typical analytics services, that provide ag-
7 gregate statistics, these scripts are intended for re-8 cording and playback of individual browsing ses-9 sions, as if someone is looking over your shoulder.".

10 (7) The volume of data now publicly available
11 and attributable to a specific individual permits re-12 searchers to infer private information about that in-13 dividual that the individual never disclosed publicly.

14 (8) According to a study from researchers at 15 Cambridge University and Microsoft Research, an 16 individual's social media posts, pictures, and profile 17 information can be combined to reliably infer that 18 individual's latent personality traits, including open-19 ness, conscientiousness, extraversion, agreeableness, 20 and neuroticism. Prior to internet-based data track-
21 ing, the only way to obtain that type of sensitive 22 psychological data would have been for an individual 23 to elect to respond to a detailed personality question-24 naire.

1 (9) According to a study published by the Na-
2 tional Academy of Sciences, computers can predict 3 an individual's latent personality traits better than 4 humans. Specifically, researchers found that a com-5 puter needed only 10 social media impressions to 6 better predict an individual's responses to a person-
7 ality questionnaire than a coworker, 70 for a cohabi-
8 tant or friend, 150 for a family member, and 300 9 for a spouse.

10 (10) Communications tailored to an individual's 11 unique personality traits are designed to manipulate 12 cognitive function rather than to persuade via ap-13 peals to rational decision making. A forthcoming
14 publication by Julie E. Cohen titled "Between Truth 15 and Power" describes the phenomenon as follows 16 "The operation of the digital information environ-
17 ment has begun to mimic the operation of the collec-
18 tion of brain structures that mid-twentieth-century 19 neurologists christened the limbic system and that 20 play vital roles in a number of precognitive func-21 tions, including emotion, motivation, and habit-for-22 mation," and observed that "today's networked in-23 formation flows are optimized to produce what social 24 psychologist Shoshana Zuboff calls instrumentarian
25 power: They employ a radical behaviorist approach

1 to human psychology to mobilize and reinforce pat-
2 terns of motivation, cognition, and behavior that op-3 erate on automatic, near-instinctual levels and that 4 may be manipulated instrumentally”.

5 (11) According to numerous studies, messages
6 tailored to an individual’s unique personality traits
7 are materially more effective at altering an individ-8 ual’s behavior.

9 (12) A recent study published in the National 10 Academy of Sciences found that it is possible to con-11 duct psychological manipulation efforts online that 12 are targeted and customized to each individual’s 13 unique personality traits on a national scale.

14 (13) Candidates, campaigns, and political orga-
15 nizations are increasingly using online data to infer 16 personality traits and other psychological character-17 istics regarding specific United States persons, using 18 that nonpublic information to target psychologically
19 manipulative communications and using algorithms
20 and other automated processes to automatically re-
21 fine communications over time to improve their ef-22 fectiveness.

23 (14) According to a study titled “Voter Privacy
24 in the Age of Big Data”, political entities “assemble 25 a vast array of [personally identifiable information]

1 into detailed dossiers on practically every American 2 voter in order to target voters with individualized
3 messages . . . Most voters are ignorant of the steps 4 taken to create these dossiers and know even less 5 about related targeting practices.”.

6 (15) The study further found that “Political 7 databases hold records on almost 200 million eligible 8 American voters. Each records contains hundreds if 9 not thousands of fields derived from voter rolls, 10 donor and response data, campaign web data, and 11 consumer and other data obtained from data bro-
12 kers, all of which is combined into a giant assem-13 blage . . . Ubiquitous personal identifiers (name, 14 address, telephone numbers, email addresses, IP ad-
15 dresses, cookies, mobile devices IDs, and other 16 unique IDs) allow campaigns to link and integrate 17 these diverse data sets, while data mining and so-18 phisticated statistical techniques allow them to en-
19 gage in highly strategic and cost-effective analysis 20 and targeting,” and that “Campaign insiders and 21 paid consultants who not only view voter microtar-
22 geting as highly effective but also have assigned it 23 a crucial role in determining the outcome of the past 24 three presidential campaigns.”.

(16) The political consulting firm Cambridge Analytica reportedly used a database of 220,000,000 Americans, including thousands of unique data points on each individual and inferred personality trait analysis, to conduct “psychological operations changing people’s minds not through persuasion but through ‘informational dominance’, a set of techniques that includes rumor, disinformation and fake news”. Cambridge Analytica reportedly worked in 44 United States elections in 2014 and another 50 in 2016, including on behalf of 2 major Presidential campaigns.

1 Act’s prohibition on corporate independent expendi-
2 tures on the grounds that “the First Amendment 3 does not allow political speech restrictions based on 4 a speaker’s corporate identity”. Allowing individuals
5 to control the use of their own personal information 6 in the context of an election does not restrict the po-
7 litical speech of any person based on their identity.

8 (19) In Buckley v. Valeo, the Supreme Court
9 invalidated the Federal Election Campaign Act’s ex-10 penditure limitations, finding that they “impose di-11 rect and substantial restraints on the quantity of po-12 litical speech”. Allowing individuals to control the 13 use of their own personal information in the context 14 of an election does not limit the any person’s quan-
15 tity of political speech.

16 SEC. 3. SENSE OF CONGRESS.

17 It is the sense of Congress that—

18 (1) the Federal Government has a compelling 19 interest in protecting voters from surveillance and 20 manipulation; and

21 (2) the Voter Privacy Act of 2019 is the most 22 narrowly tailored approach to protecting voters from 23 psychological manipulation online, however the Fed-24 eral Government’s interest would justify additional 25 prohibitions if this Act is insufficient.

1 SEC. 4. VOTER DATA PRIVACY.
