A BILL

To prohibit certain foreign and domestic emoluments, and for other purposes.

1 Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representa-
2 tives of the United States of America in Congress assembled,

3 SECTION 1. SHORT TITLE.

4 This Act may be cited as the “Foreign and Domestic 5 Emoluments Enforcement Act”.

6 SEC. 2. FINDINGS.

7 The Congress finds the following:

8 (1) The Founders of the United States believed 9 that political corruption and the interference of for-

1       eign governments were among the gravest threats
2       the Nation faced. As a result, they viewed anti-cor-
3       ruption measures as essential to preserving an en-
4       during democracy.

5               (2) The Founders wanted to ensure that the 6       Nation’s leaders would be dependent on the people
7       alone, not on those offering private financial re-
8       wards—and would be motivated solely by the na-
9       tional interest, not their own personal interests.

10              (3) The Founders were especially worried that 11       foreign powers would interfere with the internal af-
12       fairs of the United States, undermining the Nation’s 13       republican institutions and making its leaders sub-
14       servient to foreign interests. In The Federalist No.
15       22, Alexander Hamilton wrote that one of the 16       vulnerabilities of republics “is that they afford too
17       easy an inlet to foreign corruption”. He was aware 18       that eighteenth-century monarchs used lavish pre-19       sents to ingratiate themselves with ambassadors and 20       ministers from other nations and wanted to avoid 21       the potential for such corruption in the new Govern-
22       ment of the United States.

23              (4) Of particular concern to the Founders was 24       the risk that benefits and rewards given by foreign 25       states would subvert the President’s undivided loy-

1 alty to the Nation’s best interests. As Hamilton
2 noted during the Constitutional Convention, the per-
3 sonal interest of a hereditary monarch was “so inter-4 woven with that of the Nation . . . that he was 5 placed above the danger of being corrupted from 6 abroad.”. By contrast, as James Madison observed, 7 an elected President would lack “that permanent
8 stake in the public interest which would place him
9 out of the reach of foreign corruption.”.

10 (5) The Founders were also concerned that do-
11 mestic government officials might corrupt the Presi-
12 dent’s independence and gain the loyalty of the 13 President by giving the President financial benefits
14 and advantages. Hamilton observed in The Fed-
15 eralist No. 73 that “a power over a man’s support 16 is a power over his will,” and that if legislatures
17 could alter the President’s financial circumstances,
18 they could “tempt him by largesses” and thereby 19 cause the President “to surrender at discretion his 20 judgment to their inclinations.”.

21 (6) To increase the likelihood that the Nation’s 22 leaders would be dependent upon “We the People”
23 alone, the Founders included in the Constitution a
24 number of safeguards against corruption, including 25 article I, section 9, clause 8 (in this section referred

1 to as the “Foreign Emoluments Clause”) and article
2 II, section 1, clause 7 (in this section referred to as 3 the “Domestic Emoluments Clause”).

4 (7) In the Foreign Emoluments Clause, the 5 Founders mandated congressional approval of pre-6 sents, emoluments, offices, and titles offered by for-
7 eign states to Federal officeholders. They recognized
8 that the dangers of foreign-government influence 9 and divided loyalty would be reduced if officeholders
10 were required to obtain the affirmative consent of 11 Congress before accepting any foreign benefit. As 12 Representative James Bayard explained in the 13 1790s, the Foreign Emoluments Clause requires of-14 ficeholders “to make known to the world whatever 15 presents they might receive from foreign Courts and 16 to place themselves in such a situation as to make 17 it impossible for them to be unduly influenced by 18 any such presents.”.

19 (8) In the Domestic Emoluments Clause, the 20 Founders provided that Presidents must receive a 21 fixed compensation, which may not be increased or 22 decreased during their time in office, and that Presi-
23 dents are prohibited from accepting anything beyond
24 that compensation from Federal, State, or local gov-
25 ernments. These requirements were meant to pre-

1 vent Federal, State, and local officials from exerting
2 undue influence over Presidents by manipulating the 3 financial rewards of their office.

4 (9) At the time of the Founding, the word
5 “emolument” was a broad and commonly used term 6 that meant profit, advantage, gain, or benefit, in-
7 cluding payments and other financial rewards de-
8 rived from private commerce. The use of this broad 9 term in the Foreign Emoluments Clause and the 10 Domestic Emoluments Clause was consistent with 11 the Framers’ goal of preventing the corruption of 12 leaders of the United States through private re-
13 wards.
