Employees covered by the PSRA include all state civil service employees, unless an exemption applies. The director of the Office will be hired jointly by the Secretary of the Senate and the Chief Clerk of the House, in consultation with legislative employees, the Senate Facilities and Operations Committee and the House Executive Rules Committee, and legislative human resource officers. The duties of the Office include conducting negotiations on behalf of the employer.

The director of the Office, in consultation with with the Secretary of the Senate, the Chief Clerk of the House, and the administrative heads of legislative agencies must examine issues related to collective bargaining with staff of the legislative branch and develop best practices and options for the Legislature to consider when implementing and administering collective bargaining. The director must provide a report to the appropriate committees of the Legislature on issues pertaining to collective bargaining, such as the subjects of bargaining, which employees may be appropriate for bargaining, and certification and grievance procedures. The report must include a summary of any statutory changes needed to address the considerations related to the director's finding related to the collective bargaining process for legislative employees. A preliminary report is due to the appropriate committees of the Legislature by October 1, 2022, and a final report by October 1, 2023.

Legislative Branch Employee Bargaining Rights. Legislative employees have the right to organize, bargain collectively, and to refrain from any or all such activities. The right to strike or refuse to perform official duties is not granted.
