Background: Business and Occupation Tax. Washington's major business tax is the business and occupation (B&O) tax. The B&O tax is imposed on the gross receipts of business activities conducted within the state, without any deduction for the costs of doing business. Businesses must pay the B&O tax even though they may not have any profits or may be operating at a loss. A taxpayer may have more than one B&O tax rate, depending on the types of activities conducted. Major B&O tax rates are 0.471 percent for retailing; 0.484 percent for manufacturing, wholesaling, and extracting; and depending on the size of the business as determined by gross income, either 1.5 or 1.75 percent for services and activities not classified elsewhere. Several preferential rates as well as increased rates or surcharges also apply to specific business activities.

Retail Sales and Use Tax. Retail sales taxes are imposed on retail sales of most articles of tangible personal property, digital products, and some services. A retail sale is a sale to the final consumer or end user of the property, digital product, or service. If retail sales taxes were not collected when the user acquired the property, digital products, or services, then use taxes apply to the value of property, digital products, or services when used in this state. The state, most cities, and all counties levy retail sales and use taxes. The state sales and use tax rate is 6.5 percent. Local sales and use tax rates vary from 0.5 percent to over 3 percent, depending on the location.

The sale of meals to consumers is generally considered to be a retail sale subject to retail sales tax and B&O tax under the retailing classification. However, hospitals, nursing homes, assisted living facilities and similar health care facilities are not considered to be making retail sales of meals when furnishing meals as part of the health care services provided to their patients or residents.

In contrast, meals furnished to tenants living independently in a senior living facility and not paying for health-related services as part of their rent are retail sales of the meals. The facility must collect retail sales tax and pay retailing B&O tax on the fair selling price of the meals, even if the facility does not separately itemize the charge for the meals. If the facility does not keep records showing the fair selling price of the meals, the Department of Revenue (DOR) requires the tax to be calculated on double the cost of the meals served, including the cost of purchasing the food, preparing and serving the meals, and all other incidental costs, including overhead expenses.

Tax Preference Review Requirements. State law provides a range of tax preferences that confer reduced tax liability upon a designated class of taxpayer. Tax preferences include tax exclusions, deductions, exemptions, preferential tax rates, deferrals, and credits. Legislation that establishes or expands a tax preference must include a tax preference performance statement (TPPS) that identifies the public policy objective of the preference, as well as specific metrics the Joint Legislative Audit and Review Committee (JLARC) can use to review the effectiveness of the preference in achieving its stated public policy objectives. Tax preferences must be reviewed by JLARC at least once every ten years, unless state statute requires otherwise. All new tax preferences automatically expire after ten years unless an alternative expiration date is provided or the tax preference is exempt from expiration. To assist the Legislature in its evaluation of economic development-related tax preferences, taxpayer beneficiaries are required to file annual tax preference performance reports detailing wages and employment of the taxpayer as well as tax savings from the tax preference.

Summary of Bill (First Substitute): A retail sales and use tax exemption is created for meals furnished to those tenants of assisted living facilities and continuing care facilities that are living independently and not paying for health care services as part of their rental agreement.

Amounts received for food, drink, or meals furnished by a senior living community to tenants as part of a rental or residency agreement for which no separate charge is made are exempt from B&O tax.

The bill is exempt from the automatic 10-year expiration date and JLARC review.

EFFECT OF CHANGES MADE BY WAYS & MEANS COMMITTEE (First Substitute):

- Makes the amendatory provisions creating tax relief more simple and efficient—the language excluding the sale of food, drink, or meals from the statutory definition of retail sale is replaced with sales and use tax exemptions.
- Clarifies that the B&O tax exemption for food, drink, or meals applies only if the rental or residency agreement constitutes a lease or rental of real estate exempt from B&O tax.
- Clarifies the definition of “senior living community” by requiring the facility to be specifically licensed or registered under applicable law.
- Eliminates the retroactivity provision.

Appropriation: None.

Fiscal Note: Available.

Creates Committee/Commission/Task Force that includes Legislative members: No.

Effective Date: Ninety days after adjournment of session in which bill is passed.

Staff Summary of Public Testimony on Original Bill: The committee recommended a different version of the bill than what was heard. PRO: This is a simple bill that will address unfair, escalating costs. If this bill is not passed, many retirement home residents will have to give up eating so that they can afford to buy their prescriptions. Costs for seniors have gone up 17% this year in rent and taxes, and many are living off fixed income. This bill will help residents in senior living communities as well as the whole state.

OTHER: There are some issues with the current bill, but a substitute is in progress that will make it more administrable.

Persons Testifying: PRO: Senator Ron Muzzall, Prime Sponsor; Barbara Lane; Roman Daniels-Brown, WA Health Care Association.

OTHER: Steve Ewing, Department of Revenue.

Persons Signed In To Testify But Not Testifying: No one.
