Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

This bill requires the Department of Health Services to establish a long-term care investment program that is administered and promoted by a manager, for which investments are made by a manager, and that allows an account owner—an individual, a married couple, domestic partners, or a trust—to establish a long-term care investment account to cover long-term care costs. The program's functions of administration, promotion, and investment are performed by one manager or multiple managers performing any combination of the functions. The bill creates a procedure for the selection of a manager and the execution of a contract with that manager and establishes criteria on provisions to be included in the contract with a manager.

Under the bill, an account owner must meet certain criteria, including having attained the age of 18, except for persons designated by a trust, and being listed on the account application. An account owner may contribute to a long-term care investment account or may authorize another person to contribute.

The bill provides that any amount contributed to an account each year, up to $5,500, or $8,500 for those over age 50, is exempt from taxation, as is any interest, dividends, or other gain that accrues in the account if such amounts are redeposited into the account. Amounts withdrawn from the account are also exempt from taxation if the withdrawal is for a qualified use. Beginning in 2018, these dollar amounts are indexed for inflation. Amounts contributed to an account that exceed the maximum amount that is eligible for the tax exemption may be carried forward to the next taxable year. Also under the bill, in calculating the itemized deductions credit, a claimant may not include unreimbursed medical expenses to the extent that such expenses were paid with amounts withdrawn from an account.

ASSEMBLY BILL 596

The bill also allows the account owner to select or change the beneficiary, and to transfer all or a portion of the account to another account. An account terminates upon the death of the individual account owners, and the proceeds of the account are distributed to a beneficiary, if named by the account owner. A beneficiary may retain the account as a long-term care investment account and becomes the account owner if the beneficiary meets the criteria to be an account owner.

An individual account owner is not eligible for Medical Assistance programs, including certain long-term care programs and Family Care, until the individual spends down the income and assets in the account to a level that would qualify for eligibility for the applicable program. For programs other than Medical Assistance and other programs that provide long-term care services, any person who is determining eligibility for a state or federal program must exclude from the determination any income from or assets accumulated in an account for the account owner, except this exclusion does not apply to eligibility for federal programs unless the federal government approves.

The bill specifies certain uses of account funds that are considered qualified uses. Before a use of account funds is considered a qualified use, a licensed or certified health care professional must submit documentation to the manager that one of the events or conditions specified in the bill has occurred. Payment of a premium for long-term care insurance that meets criteria set by the manager is a qualified use without documentation of one of the specified events or conditions.

Because this bill relates to an exemption from state or local taxes, it may be referred to the Joint Survey Committee on Tax Exemptions for a report to be printed as an appendix to the bill.

For further information see the state fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.

The people of the state of Wisconsin, represented in senate and assembly, do enact as follows:

5 (d) 1. A guardian, as defined in s. 54.01 (10), may establish a long-term care

7 or domestic partnership requires the affirmative consent of both individual account
8 owners of the couple or partnership except that a qualified use of long-term care
9 investment account funds may be made by an individual account owner of the couple
10 or partnership. For a long-term care investment account that has already been 11 established, an account owner that is a married couple or domestic partnership may 12 authorize, using a form created by the manager, an individual account owner to act
13 on behalf of the account owner that is a couple or partnership.

14 (g) At the time a long-term care investment account is established for an 15 account owner that is trust, the trust instrument or a trustee acting on behalf of the

20 instrument or by the trustee for qualified use of long-term care investment account
21 funds shall meet the requirements under par. (a) for an account owner, except that

- 7 7. Funeral expenses or estate expenses of a deceased individual account owner
