Analysis by the Legislative Reference Bureau

This bill expands access to original impounded birth records, allowing an adoptee and any other person whose original birth record has been impounded to obtain access and an uncertified copy of his or her original record upon request once the person is 18 years of age.

Under current law, the Department of Children and Families administers an adoption search program under which a person 18 years of age or over whose birth parent's rights have been terminated in this state may request DCF to provide the person with any information that is available to DCF regarding the identity and location of the person's birth parents. DCF may provide the identity and location of a birth parent only if DCF has on file an unrevoked affidavit from each known birth parent authorizing DCF to disclose that information. If DCF does not have on file an unrevoked affidavit from each known birth parent, DCF must search for each birth parent who has not filed an affidavit and, upon locating a birth parent, must give the birth parent an opportunity to file an affidavit. If a known birth parent cannot be located, DCF may disclose the identity and location of that birth parent if the other birth parent has filed an unrevoked affidavit. If a birth parent who has not filed an affidavit is known to be deceased, DCF may not provide the identity of that birth parent but may provide the identity and location of the other birth parent if the other birth parent has filed an unrevoked affidavit and if one year has elapsed since the death of the deceased birth parent.

Generally, under current law, if the state registrar receives a court or administrative order providing for an adoption, the state registrar must prepare a new birth record for the subject of the adoption unless the adoptive parents or the adoptee requests that no new record be prepared. The new record must show certain information including the names and personal information of the adoptive parents and must show the hospital and time of birth as unknown. The state registrar must impound the original birth record and all related materials and may generally not provide access to them, except when authorized by the birth parent in an affidavit prepared using the procedure under current law that is described above.

Also under current law, a person who assumes custody of an infant of unknown parentage must file a birth record (foundling birth record) for the infant containing certain information about the infant. If the infant is later adopted and the adoptive parents sign a birth record giving their names as the adoptive parents, the state registrar must impound the foundling birth record and generally may not provide access to it. Current law also provides that if a person is born to a surrogate, the surrogate's name is entered on the original birth certificate and, if a court subsequently determines parental rights, the state registrar must then prepare and register a new birth record and impound the original.

The bill eliminates language allowing for access to an adoptee's original, impounded birth record only when access has been granted by the birth parent in an affidavit. The bill instead requires the state registrar to provide any person over the age of 18 whose original birth record has been impounded with unrestricted access to the person's original unaltered birth record and issue that person an uncertified copy of the original unaltered birth record. The bill also requires that the state registrar, when issuing an uncertified copy of an original, impounded birth record, to inform the recipient about current law provisions regarding access to certain information about a person's birth parents. The bill does not change certain restrictions applicable to vital record access in the circumstance of adoptions involving an Indian child.

For further information see the state fiscal estimate, which will be printed as an appendix to this bill.
